

METHOD AND APPARATUS FOR SUPPLEMENTARY COMMAND BUS

Abstract

An electronic system according to various aspects of the present invention includes a memory having a location-specific command interface and a general command interface. The memory communicates with other components in the system via a main command bus configured to transfer address-specific commands and a supplementary command bus configured to transfer general commands. Commands may be received by the memory simultaneously at the respective interfaces.